A Story of Flaming Youth

Eyes of Love

DRAWN BY STELLA THORNE

ADVICE TO LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

Several months ago, during my vacation, I visited a married cousin who lives in another State.
While I was at her home she asked me to visit with her a bachelor relative of her family. He kindly invited me to remain for dinner.
He was proper to write him an invitation to visit me at his home? Or should I wait until he has permission to do so?

VERY ANXIOUS

YOU could hardly ask him to visit for any length of time on a work night acquaintance. If ever he is in the city where you live it would be better to write him and ask him to come. And I'll be released to have you send back Mabel's loan and return the cash—was that it?
I'm sure you will be glad of the
ready cash.

WAYS OF A HUSBAND

By Ann Lisle

WELL, the leopard can't change his spots and the angel can't lose her wings. So when I do demand that you turn into somebody you're not? You're just my faithful, unimportant streamer of a wife
—and maybe if I could change you
I wouldn't see any real improvement.
I have a compliment to better than none, so I wish eagerly!

Jim—I do so want to be of service to you—if only I can do it rightly. Why, the fifteen thousand dollars! It's twenty-five thousand said for the moment, but I've got to return Mabel's loan at once.

Jim smiled, and to turn his wreck at the mention of Mabel I hurried on to say:
"My quarrel with Bartley Togg
has been referring to let him have the money to invest. And my reason for refusing was that I thought you might be glad of the
ready cash."

NEWBURYPORT MAYOR AND BUSINESS MEN OFFER ECONOMIC SOLUTIONS

By HERT FORD
Newburyport, Jan. 17.—Mayor Michael Cashman at a meeting of the city and town board of directors last night proposed the abandonment of the Wakefield Centre-Newburyport branch as part of the service curtailment plan of the Boston & Maine Railroad. Mayor Cashman is anxious that train service be retained on this line, but deprecates any official action that might prevent a concession by the railroad.

RAILROAD. If the Newburyport branch is discontinued this industry will, doubtless, have to seek a new location for its plant.

The people of this town, through their representatives in the Legislature, should oppose the proposed abandonment of the branch for what is our problem today will be their problem tomorrow.

Tells Audience

New York, Jan. 17.—(The Associated Press.)—Before an audience of 3,500 people, at the Hippodrome last night, Harry Houdini declared that "Margery," Boston medium, who was examined by a committee appointed by the Scientific American, is "a hypocrite and a very cheap fraud."

Houdini accused Scientist I. Madison Bird, former managing editor of the Scientific American and a member of the committee, of being "Margery's" dupe in causing the death of her dead brother, "Walter," to rap on tables and slam doors.

He asserted that Bird, because of partiality to the medium, has resigned as managing editor, and that articles written by Bird, for the Scientific American dealing with the investigation of "Margery" were never printed.

BEARS FEWER THAN BALBS 'SOLD OUT'

By FRANK H. WELDON.

Financial Editor.

What of the future of the bull market?

I am frequently asked this question.

The answer, of course, is a matter of speculation, and speculation, in its very essence, is guessing.

It is possible, however, to say that the "bull" market, which has been snatched up by profits—some enormous—enters the present-day stage.

You all remember the story of the man who cried "Wolf" until one day the wolf came.

History is prone to repeat itself.

If a brokerage house after writing down predicting a stock market reaction, it is bound to be right.

It is possible, however, to say that the "bull" market, which has been snatched up by profits—some enormous—enters the present-day stage.

There is no need to pay a great deal of attention to those who seek notoriety by being constantly heard on the American business, both in and out of the stock market.

At the same time a cautious note may well be sounded for its benefit of those who do not want without giving it careful thought.

FINANCE

By B. C. Forbes.

Every big merchant in America would seem, in reading buyers in New York this morning. The number there is declared to be the largest ever known.

They are not come simply to look. They are buying goods.

Today's trade in most sections topped off records. There has been for many moderate purchases for immediate delivery. It still remains true, however, that merchants have not been stampeded into placing big orders for distant delivery, notwithstanding all the fore forecasts of what 1925 is to bring in the way of a booming business.

After all, when buying is profitable to a merchant, buying is profitable to a merchant. There is likely to be more danger that merchants and others will lose their head than that they will get cold feet.

By the way, visitors here are not finding New York dry.

Wall Street's most prominent and picturesque speculator, Jesse L. Livermore, is declared by his friends to have taken little or no part in the recent and present big movement in the stock market. They say that he was holed at the time the sensational advance set in and that he squandered his accounts early in the advance and since then has been quietly as a collector at present.

It is said that he is in Florida—so much so that he suffered on a fishing boat last week while on a fishing trip on board his yacht.

The name of W. C. Durant has been dropped that of Livermore in the group of Wall Street when certain circles about up spending. If all takes its turn, Durant has been making more money from speculating than anyone else.

Many still feel that the 1925 top has not yet been reached by stocks (Copyright, 1925, by R. C. Forbes).
